

SECC Congress 2023 Taipei Report

Smart Emergency and Critical Care conference

SECC Congress 2023 Taipei was took place with remarkable success at the National Taiwan University International Conference Center from October 14th to October 15th.

The conference attracted over 2,421 participants, including 2,311 domestic participants and 110 oversea participants. The extensive scientific program developed between TSCCM (Taiwan Society of Critical Care Medicine), and TSECCM (Taiwan Society of Emergency and Critical Care Medicine) . The success of this Congress came from cooperation of international society of critical care, Including Society of critical care medicine (SCCM), Japan JSICM and Korea KSCCM. The congress theme this year is “Smart Emergency and Critical care Medicine.” A total of 27 foreign speakers and 100 domestic speakers were invited to participate in the conference, either online or in person, collectively sharing their experiences and expertise in the fields of emergency and critical care, as well as precision medicine.

The SECC course covered topics as diverse as AI Management and data science, COVID-19, Trauma Care System, New Trends of the Treatment in Cardiac Care, sepsis management, AKI, Updated Practice Guidelines, quality management and patient safety.

In addition to featuring experienced and professional speakers from both domestic and international backgrounds, the conference included two paper presentation sessions: Oral Presentation and E-Poster. These sessions provided opportunities for attendees to absorb more knowledge and engage in mutual discussions with presenters, exchanging perspectives and experiences. Furthermore, the conference organized a flash debate competition, employing a relaxed and enjoyable team-based quiz format that allowed both attendees and participants on stage to absorb professional knowledge beyond the confines of traditional academic settings.

With the support and sponsorship of our industry partners, the conference featured demonstrations of many of the latest products and advanced services available to intensive care professionals.

TSCCM, and TSECCM would like to take this opportunity to thank all the participants, partners, delegates, and our industry partners for playing an essential part in putting together this unforgettable, world class event. We are creating beautiful memories and achieved success for the SECC Congress 2023 Taipei. Looking forward to next year's conference, we wish you all the very best.
